

Read the Chinese story and answer the following questions.

Whole-hearted Devotion

1. Once upon a time, there was a famous chess player named Yi Qiu. He was highly respected by people because of his superb chess skills in weiqi.
2. Many people wanted to become Yi Qiu's students because of his brilliant skills. Once he was teaching two students the same skills in a class. One of the students listened to his words very carefully and had full concentration in class. The other student, who appeared to be listening, was in fact daydreaming. When he attended Yi Qiu's class, he always looked at the fields outside the windows, and dreamed of shooting and catching wild geese which were flying in the sky. "If I have a bow and some arrows, I will shoot the wild geese and cook them. How wonderful!" thought the absent-minded student.
3. After a few months, Yi Qiu asked his two students to play a game of weiqi in order to see how well they learnt. In the first few rounds, the absent-minded student was in a leading position. However, he lost in the last few rounds because of his poor chess skills. On the other hand, the attentive student gradually fought back in a calm and thoughtful manner.
4. When Yi Qiu saw it, he advised the lazy student and said, "You need to practise hard and concentrate if you want to master the skills well." Although the two students studied together and were taught by Yi Qiu at the same time, the dedicated student finally became a well-known chess master. Luckily, the absent-minded student learnt a lesson and was regretful. From then onwards, he tried very hard to improve his learning attitude.

