Parent Education Resource Package for Primary Schools

Laying a solid foundation for development:
How to build a positive parent-child relationship?

Strand I: Understanding of Child Development

Introduction

A positive parent-child relationship lays the foundation for a child's healthy and happy development. Parents who embrace a positive parenting style can effectively guide their children towards developing positive behaviours, thereby reducing instances of misbehaviour. This activity introduces various skills such as assertive communication and quality time for fostering effective parent-child interaction, with an aim to help parents understand positive parenting and empower them to build a positive parent-child relationship.
