Police probe case of cat with stomach cut open

The discovery of a dead cat with what appeared to be a slash wound in its stomach has triggered a police investigation into whether foul play was involved. Officers were called to Kwai Shing West Estate, off Kwai Shing Circuit in Kwai Chung, shortly after 7:30am yesterday, when the carcass was found. The cat's abdomen appeared to have been slashed open, a police spokesman said. The spokesman said an avian from the Agriculture, Fisheries and Conservation Department was brought in to inspect the carcass, which was found in a parkside Block 10 of the residential estate. Crime squad officers have checked CCTV footage in the area. Detectives from the Kwai Tsing criminal investigation unit are handling the case. The female cat was domestic short-haired adult with no identification microchip. The carcass was collected by staff from the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and will be handed to the Agriculture, Fisheries and Conservation Department for an autopsy. The incident comes a couple of days after two clogs containing the carcasses of a dog and two cats were found washed ashore on a rocky Lantau island beach. That gruesome discovery led to the finding of 15 cat and dog carcasses at the city's beaches in August. Law enforcers at the time said the animals might have been thrown overboard by smugglers who were being pursued. According to official statistics, the authorities were notified of 150 suspected animal cruelty cases in the first half of this year. There were 288 such reports over the entirety of last year and 368 cases the year before. Between January and June this year, there were five related prosecutions, compared with 29 in the whole of last year and 27 in 2018. Chai Fat Tai, the acting secretary for food and health, told lawmaker Elizabeth Quai in a written reply on Wednesday that most of the cases were nuisance-related rather than incidents of animal cruelty. "Upon receiving reports of suspected animal cruelty cases, the police force or the Agriculture, Fisheries and Conservation Department will conduct an investigation. Prosecution will be initiated if there is sufficient evidence." Cruelty to animals carries a maximum penalty of three years in jail and a HK$200,000 fine.
